Did you know that North Carolina is home to a park containing the world's largest collection of waterfowl? If you're looking for an entertaining and educational experience for the entire family, take a trip to Sylvan Heights

Waterfowl Park and Eco-Center in scenic eastern North Carolina.

Sylvan Heights is dedicated to the conservation of the world's waterfowl. With 1,000 birds representing more than 170 species, the park houses the largest collection of ducks, geese and swans in the world, including many rare and endangered species and some of the rarest birds in the world. Sylvan Heights is also home to other unique birds, such as parrots, pheasants and cranes, but the birds are just the beginning...

The whole family will enjoy exploring the park's gardens, trails and aviaries that feature birds from six continents. The park is specially designed to give visitors close-up encounters with these colorful and exotic-looking birds. To fully enjoy the sights and sounds of the park, plan to make a day of it. Children will love the park's playground, and when lunchtime comes, just head over to the shaded picnic areas located throughout the park. Be sure to visit the gift shop as well, where you'll find a wide assortment of nature-related gifts for all ages, from clothing and stuffed animals to original artwork.

With its rustic, natural setting, the visitor's center is an ideal place for special events like wedding receptions, birthday parties and reunions. The spacious Golden LEAF room is available for business conferences and mini-retreats.
